

● Critical — Fix These First

1. Onboarding is visually empty The 3 onboarding slides are icon + headline + subtext on a white background. There's no imagery, no energy, no sense of what the nightlife experience actually feels like. For an app about going out, the first impression should be cinematic — dark backgrounds, real venue photography, or animated visuals. Right now it doesn't match the product's personality.
2. Home feed has a dead "Trending Now" section The section header exists but shows "No events available right now" with a concert ticket emoji in the middle of white space. This is the worst possible first impression post-login. Either hide empty sections entirely, show nearby events as fallback, or show curated/editorial content as placeholders when inventory is thin.
3. Location shows raw coordinates instead of an address "Selected Location (32.9537, -96.8191)" appears on both the event detail and the map. This should resolve to a human-readable address or at minimum a neighborhood name. Coordinates feel like a bug.
4. Login has no social auth No Apple, Google, or phone number login. For a nightlife app targeting a younger audience, email/password is a friction-heavy barrier. Apple Sign-In is also required by App Store guidelines if you offer any third-party auth. Add it now before scale becomes an issue.

● High Impact — Meaningfully Improves the Product

5. Event detail page is missing critical nightlife info The event page has Busy Now, Vibe score, and Perks — which is great — but is missing: dress code, age requirement (21+?), parking info, cover charge (TBA isn't enough), and a capacity/crowd level indicator. These are the exact questions someone asks before deciding whether to go out.
6. No "Going / Interested" social signal on events The event card shows "0 👤 0+" but there's no way to express interest or intent. Users can Check In (in-person) but can't signal they're planning to go. "Going Tonight" as a pre-event action would drive social proof and help populate that 0/0+ counter.
7. "Tonight's Chat" is locked behind check-in The idea is smart but the execution kills engagement. Requiring physical presence to join a venue chat means the chat is always empty when a user is deciding whether to go — the exact moment they'd benefit from seeing it. Consider a "Lurk" mode or a pre-arrival preview of recent messages.
8. Create Event form is missing key fields No description/about field, no category/type selector, no cover charge or ticket price field, no capacity limit, no end time (only start time), and no way to add perks (which is a core differentiator on the event detail page). Organizers can't set the experience they want to communicate.
9. Interests screen has icon mismatch "Upscale / VIP" and "Late-Night Food & Drinks" both use the same coffee cup icon. "Rooftops & Views" uses a fork/knife icon. These mismatches undermine trust in small ways. Each category needs a distinct, semantically correct icon.

● Medium — Fills Real Gaps

10. Profile page has no activity or personality The profile shows 0s across the board with no empty state guidance. There's no bio, no "nights out" count, no neighborhood or city shown, and "Favorite Spots" is a flat empty section. The profile should feel like a nightlife identity — lean into that.
11. Messages / Chat has no entry point to start a conversation The Chat tab shows "No conversations yet" with no CTA. How does a conversation start? Can you message event organizers? Can you DM someone you met at a venue? The nav tab implies a DM product but there's no way to initiate one.
12. Notifications screen is a dead end Empty state with just "No notifications yet" and no context about what kinds of notifications to expect or how to trigger them. Add an empty state that promotes action — "Follow a venue or RSVP to an event to get notified."
13. Map filter pills are visually inconsistent On the map, "All" is white-on-purple, "Celebration" and "Day party" are white-on-black. The dark pill style doesn't match the brand. These should use the same purple/brand treatment as the rest of the app.
14. No social login / Sign Up flow visible The login screen says "Have an account? Sign up" — but there's no sign-up screen shown. The onboarding interests flow appears before auth, which raises the question: does the app gate on account creation before or after interests? The flow order should be deliberate and clearly communicated.

● Product Differentiators — What Would Make This Unique

15. "Vibe Summary" is gold — make it prominent The AI-generated vibe summary ("Guests say this spot has a high-energy crowd...") buried at the bottom of the event detail is arguably the most useful thing in the app. It should live near the top — right below the Busy Now / Vibe / Cover row, not 4 scrolls deep.
16. No friend/social layer visible The onboarding promises "Connect & Share" but the app has no friends, followers activity feed, or "who's going" social graph visible anywhere post-onboarding. If people can follow each other, show their activity — what events friends saved or checked into — on the home feed.
17. No push notification permission prompt shown There's a push notifications setting in Settings (on by default), but no OS-level permission prompt flow is visible. If you're requesting this permission without context, users will deny it. Show a pre-prompt with a clear value proposition before triggering the iOS system dialog.
18. Dark mode exists in settings but the whole app is stark white The current UI is very bright/light. Given the nightlife context, a dark mode-first design would feel far more appropriate and on-brand. The purple accent on dark backgrounds would look dramatically better than purple on white.
